How did we deliver this?

- Good risk adjusted returns is an outcome of Good Processes characterized by:

1 Stringent quantitative filters

- Each offering is based on deeply researched and back tested framework to generate the investment universe
- High threshold for performance over long spans of time, greatly minimize chances of poor performers or poor quality companies entering into the investment universe
- High quality of accounts and corporate governance is uncompromised

3 Focus on earnings growth + earnings quality

- Lower obsession with timing when one is investing in a superior calibre of companies
- Companies with a consistent track record and leadership traits are preferred
- Past track record + Future sector potential + Current management capabilities = Comfort on delivering quality earnings

2 Experienced team & deep-dive research

- Dedicated and experienced research team
- Research processes inspired by IE Research
- Investment Committee to approve all investment decisions
- Part of larger Ambit group lends advantages
- Focus on what is knowable and what is important

4 Risk management

- Concentrated Portfolios deliver best returns as returns do not get average out
- Lower drawdowns due to consistent performers in secular sectors
- Long term orientation with low churn realize the power of compounding

Origins of Ambit's Coffee Can Portfolio

ROBERT G KIRBY'S PAPER

The Journal of Portfolio Management

1984

The Coffee Can portfolio

You can make more money being passively active than actively passive.

Robert G. Kirby

During recent years, there has been a gradual but steady increase in the use of index funds by institutional investors. This disturbs me, because I believe that superior investment research and management can produce consistently above-average results. Even beyond that point, however, I am also bothered by the wide, unquantifying acceptance of a form of indexing that appears to be seriously flawed. Nevertheless, despite these complaints, I do not disagree out of hand with those who adopt indexed investment programs.

We all know that, in the aggregate, professional money managers do not produce a return superior to that of a broadly based, unmanaged portfolio. We ignore the data that show that a few money managers have done consistently better, and a few others have done consistently worse. This means that we should not be surprised when an investor who has been a client of a poor money manager decides that he would be better off with an index fund. To best the market is not easy. In addition to a good investment manager, the investor needs perspective, patience, and courage — qualities that do not abound in today's intensely competitive world. For many investors, institutional and individual, an index fund may well be the best kind of common stock investment program.

WHY INDEX AND WHY NOT?

Perhaps I have a suspicious and cynical mind. Each surge in the popularity of index funds seems to follow a period during which the S&P 500 has been an excellent performer. Most index funds are not set up to avoid inferior performance; their purpose is to secure superior performance — just as when an investor hires a new investment manager with a great recent record. These are the wrong reasons.

Other investors adopt index funds for the right reasons. They believe that (1) the market is efficient in pricing assets so that it is virtually impossible to achieve consistently superior returns, and (2) the underperformance of professional money managers is the result of futile transaction costs. I disagree with these assumptions, but they support a position that is logical and makes sense. The question that completely perplexes me is why, with this sensible and logical approach to equity investing, these people then choose to replicate the Standard & Poor's 500, which (1) is in reality actively managed, and (2) does not represent the market?

WHEN IS PASSIVE ACTIVE?

In case you're shocked, let's examine these two statements. First, on the point of active management, maybe you can accrue one of splitting hairs, because turnover in the S&P 500 is small in comparison to that of most "active" money managers. Even modest activity, however, if it occurs year after year, produces a substantial cumulative change in the portfolio. In the past 10 years, Standard & Poor's has made several hundred changes, both eliminations and additions, in their portfolio, and these changes have created transaction costs for holders of S&P 500 index funds. Further, the changes are not the result of a formula that produces a consistent, predictable kind of alteration: They represent individual judgments of the Standard & Poor's staff, based on a combination of research and intuition, just as old-fashioned, active portfolio managers do it. Yet many people who see

AMBIT
COFFEE CAN
PORTFOLIO

Ambit Asset Management launches Coffee Can Portfolio on PMS platform in March 2017

Stringent Investment Framework

Investment universe:

- 1) Established Coffee Can companies - 10-20 years of historical track record of consistency (>10% YoY Revenue Growth + >15% ROCE)
- 2) Prospective Coffee Can companies – Qualitative parameters

Our competitive advantage = Deep understanding of organizational DNA

Will the firm sustain CONSISTENCY of growth in future (more than a decade)?

Marry valuations with longevity

Concentrated portfolio of up to 20 stocks

Monitor earnings potential of companies in portfolio

Churn (if required) = <1 stock per year on average

Ambit Coffee Can Portfolio Philosophy

Consistent Track Record

Companies having excellent financial track record of revenue growth and earnings for over 10-20 years with identifiable DNA

Long Term Wealth Creation

Coffee Can Portfolio intends to provide 20-25% Earnings CAGR over long term holding periods with volatility of portfolio similar to Govt. bonds (holding period > 3 years)

Low/Negligible Churn

Coffee Can Portfolio is a highly concentrated portfolio with 10-15 stocks and intended churn of less than 1 stock per year on average. This allows the portfolio to benefit from "Power of Compounding"

Do not "TIME" the market

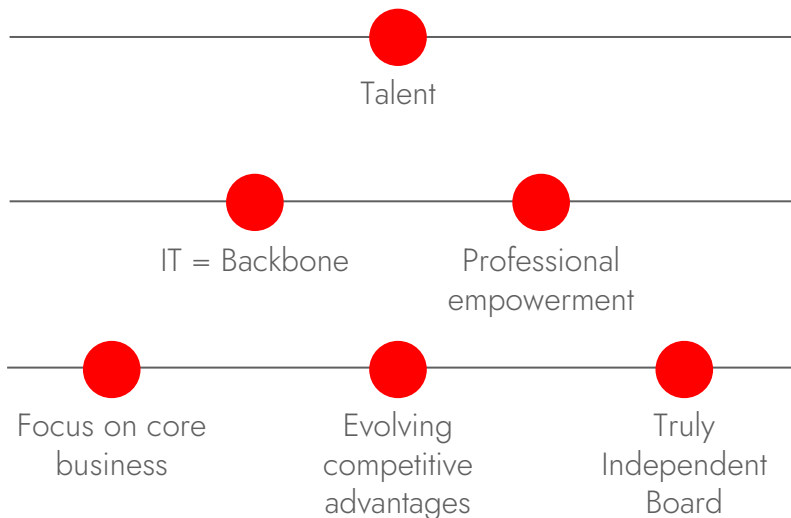

Do not attempt to time the market on the basis of speculation surrounding oil price, exchange rates, politics or other non-fundamental factors

Market Leaders in B2C Sectors

Most companies in Coffee Can Portfolio dominate their markets and possess unassailable competitive advantages in their core industries.

DNA to deliver consistent growth decade after decade

Bubbles refer to individual companies in Coffee Can Portfolio Size of the bubble indicates Market Cap size

Earnings growth is the only driver of share prices...
